Commissioner Dwight D. Jones Will Visit Greeley and Lamar For More “Race to the Top” Conversations

Commissioner of Education Dwight D. Jones will meet with school superintendents and community members in Greeley on Friday, Nov. 13 and Lamar on Monday, Nov. 23 to provide information and answer questions about the effort to win a share of the “Race to the Top” grants from the federal government.

Nina Lopez, Director of the American Reinvestment and Recovery Act (ARRA) at the Colorado Department of Education, will join Commissioner Jones.

The meeting in Greeley will begin at 8 a.m. at the Greeley-Evans School District 6 administration building, 1025 9th Ave. The meeting will run for 90 minutes.

The meeting in Lamar will begin at 8 a.m. in the Lamar Community Center, located at 601 S. 6th St. The meeting will run for an hour.

School district officials and community members from across the state are welcome to attend the meetings. School district officials and community members interested in attending are asked to e-mail Nancy Hegele at Hegele_n@cde.state.co.us to ensure space requirements are being met.

“Race to the Top” is a U.S. Department of Education discretionary grant program to states that make significant progress in achieving equity in teacher distribution, improve collection and use of data, enhance the quality of academic standards and assessments and support struggling schools.

The grant program is expected to yield $4.35 billion in competitive grants to states. States must give at least 50 percent of the dollars to local school districts and educational agencies through subgrants. Those local school districts that wish to participate in the Race to the Top opportunity will sign a memorandum of understanding with the Colorado Department of Education.

“Local school districts and local education agencies are eager to participate, based on the reaction we have had to our invitations,” said Commissioner Jones. “At the same time, we know there are many questions about the process and what participation might mean for districts and schools so we will meet with school district representatives and community members to answer as many questions as possible. This is a tremendous opportunity for Colorado and strong, local support will be an important part of our application.”

The process of developing Colorado’s application for a Race to the Top grant from the U.S. Department of Education is being led by Lt. Gov. Barbara O’Brien. Four work groups, one for each of the four assurance areas, are currently developing ideas to include in the application.
