Summary of the program: Read Well is a primary reading curriculum for grades K-3 that adjusts to the needs of each student and builds a foundation for lifelong learning. An innovative reading and language arts solution, Read Well helps students build the critical skills needed to be successful readers and learners. This research-based program allows teachers to effectively target students at all stages of development. Read Well focuses on closing the achievement gap in a student's early years in school. It offers a unique design including Small Group and Whole Class instructional opportunities, continuous progress monitoring, and a unique sound sequence that enables students to read meaningful text in the very first unit. Read Well provides explicit, systematic daily instruction in the five areas identified by researchers as critical to reading with understanding: phonemic awareness, phonics, comprehension, vocabulary, and fluency.

NOTE: We use the following descriptions to define various types of instructional support in early literacy. Please review the descriptions and identify your program according to the type of instructional support is it intended to deliver. Each approved instructional program should classify itself under one type of instructional programming only.

Core Instruction is instruction provided to all students in the class, and it is usually guided by a comprehensive core reading program. Part of the core instruction is usually provided to the class as a whole, and part is provided during the small group, differentiated instruction period. Although instruction is differentiated by student need during the small group period, materials and lesson procedures from the core program can frequently be used to provide reteaching, or additional teaching to students according to their needs.

Supplemental Instruction is instruction that goes beyond that provided by the comprehensive core program because the core program does not provide enough instruction or practice in a key area to meet the needs of the students in a particular classroom or school. For example, teachers in a school may observe that their comprehensive core program does not provide enough instruction in vocabulary, or in phonics, to adequately meet the needs of the majority of their students. They could then select a supplemental program in these areas to strengthen the initial instruction and practice provided to all students.

Intervention Instruction is provided only to students who are lagging behind their classmates in the development of critical reading skills. This instruction will usually be guided by a specific intervention program that focuses on one or more of the key areas of reading development. This type of instruction is needed by only a relatively small minority of students in a class. In some cases, students in 2nd and 3rd grade may have lagged so far behind grade level development of reading skills that very little content from the grade level comprehensive core program is suitable for them. In these cases, students may need to receive instruction guided by a comprehensive intervention program that is specifically designed to meet their specific needs while at the same time accelerating their growth toward grade level reading ability.
