This unit was authored by a team of Colorado educators. The template provided one example of unit design that enabled teacher-authors to organize possible learning experiences, resources, differentiation, and assessments. The unit is intended to support teachers, schools, and districts as they make their own local decisions around the best instructional plans and practices for all students.

A text that utilizes multiple modes (expository, narrative, persuasive, or descriptive) provides more opportunities for impact. (RWC10-GR.9-S.2-GLE.1-EO.e) and (RWC10-GR.9-S.2-GLE.2-EO.f)

SSN: More powerful writing often combines several ways such as explaining about something, telling something that happened, convincing people to change their minds or describe things so well you can picture it and it feels real.

| Critical Language: includes the Academic and Technical vocabulary, semantics, and discourse which are particular to and necessary for accessing a given discipline. EXAMPLE: A student in Language Arts can demonstrate the ability to apply and comprehend critical language through the following statement: "Mark Twain exposes the hypocrisy of slavery through the use of satire."

A student in ___________ can demonstrate the ability to apply and comprehend critical language through the following statement(s): After analyzing the context of my communication, I choose to craft a piece in the ______ genre because ______. In _______ text, I identified examples where the author used logical, emotional, and ethical appeals to attempt to convince me to adapt his/her point of view. The purpose of a piece of writing is specific and complex; modes (such as exposition, argumentation, narration, and description) can be used together to accomplish this purpose.

| Academic Vocabulary: | evaluating, determining importance, relevance, perspective, point of view, choices, context
| SSN: deciding what is important, point of view, choices, what fits with this topic |
| Technical Vocabulary: | genre, mode, rhetorical appeal, formal English, voice, style, tone, conventions
| SSN: type of writing (genre), persuasion or convincing someone, voice (of character), rules |
Unit Description:
In this 4-6 week unit, students will read an extended anchor text (e.g., To Kill a Mockingbird) exploring various themes: race, gender, age, etc. As they progress through the unit, students will read a variety of texts on the issues raised. The non-fiction/informational texts range from news reports, research, and infographics to opinion pieces, murals and art work, poems, and short stories. Students will analyze this rich variety of texts so they can understand that writers use different modes, genres, and techniques to express their perspectives on given issues. Class discussions will allow students to explore how different contexts impact our perspectives and how we write about issues or themes in the world around us. The unit will culminate with students writing a multi-genre text expressing their own perspective on an issue of inequity relevant to them. (This unit is also effective scaffolding for the unit that follows in which students will present an argument on justice.)

Considerations:
Because teachers may have varying degrees of access to texts written in multiple modes, the authors focused on having students produce a multi-genre text as the Performance Assessment. Students will encounter a variety of texts and respond to those texts by analyzing the context of the communication and critique the writer’s decisions in the communication. Students will study To Kill a Mockingbird as the anchor text for this unit because it has issues of race, gender, economic, and age themes in it. Teachers, of course, may want to choose a different anchor text (a different novel, a collection of short stories, a play, or perhaps offer literature circles for student choice of texts that explore these issues.)

SSN: Students will need access to adapted texts listed below and the presentations or writing that they create will reflect Extended Evidence Outcomes pp 6 and 7. All EEO’s are preceded by the phrase “With appropriate supports students can” They may also need an alternate ways to communicate understanding or write. Consult SWAAC team member, SPED teacher or related services professional for assistance with augmentative alternative communication (AAC) device and have an alternate pencil if needed. A worthwhile source of ideas for adapted equipment and software is: http://www.swaaac.com/Catalog/default.asp Another very useful source of adaptation ideas is : HTTP://WWW.CDE.STATE.CO.US/COEXTENDEDEO (COLORADO INSTRUCTIONAL ACCOMMODATIONS MANUAL)

Key Generalization:
A text that utilizes multiple modes (expository, narrative, persuasive, or descriptive) provides more opportunities for impact.

SSN: Students will be introduced to vocabulary that defines the different modes of writing and examples of each

Supporting Generalizations:
The analysis of authors’ intended purposes and points of view helps readers better understand the choices authors’ make and the intended impact of those choices

The choice of an appropriate genre for writing requires a close evaluation of context

Decisions about the selection of relevant evidence, development of rhetorical appeals, and crafting of style, voice, and tone should reflect the consideration of the audience

Writers attend to the conventions of language in order to establish credibility and communicate effectively

Performance Assessment: The capstone/summative assessment for this unit.

Claims:
(Key generalization(s) to be mastered and demonstrated through the capstone assessment.)

A text that utilizes multiple modes (expository, narrative, persuasive, or descriptive) provides more opportunities for impact.

Stimulus Material:
(Engaging scenario that includes role, audience, goal/outcome and explicitly connects the key generalization)

As a community member, you have been asked to participate in a project asking teenagers to present their views and perspectives on an issue of inequity that they feel is important to address. The project is to raise awareness of others within the community. Your task is to create a multi-genre text in which you include a combination of writing that may include personal experience (memoir, observation, reportage, poetry), textual analysis, argument, infographic, and perhaps a visual
Colorado Teacher-Authored Sample Instructional Unit

As Tom Romano describes it: “A multigenre paper arises from research, experience, and imagination. It is not an uninterrupted, expository monolog nor a seamless narrative nor a collection of poems. A multigenre paper is composed of many genres and subgenres, each piece self-contained, making a point of its own, yet connected by theme or topic and sometimes by language, images and content. In addition to many genres, a multigenre paper may also contain many voices, not just the author’s. The trick is to make such a paper hang together” from Blending Genre, Altering Style: Writing Multigenre Papers (2000) (x-xi).

Your multi-genre text, or parts of it, may be chosen to display in local businesses, libraries, or at school sites.

Role: Community member
Audience: Community at large
Format: Multi-genre project
Topic: An issue of inequity

Product/Evidence:
(Expected product from students)

Students will create a multi-genre text that expresses their perspective on a theme of inequity they have studied through the unit. Teachers may help guide student choice in the multi-genre pieces that come together to form the whole. Students will have their choice of the various genres: poetry, informational text, infographic, visual representation, personal narrative, argument. In addition, teachers may want to secure a place to post student work in the school and community.

SSN: The writing in the students product will reflect a shortened length (multiple sentences) as per the Extended Evidence and will involve researching one question a citing the source on the topic of inequity.

Differentiation:
(Multiple modes for student expression)

Students may use technology: (prezi, powerpoint, video)

The multi-genre facilitates many possibilities for differentiation. Students may present their and views on an issue (or issues) of inequity in the various genres:

- poetry
- informational text
- infographic
- visual representation
- personal narrative
- argument

SSN: Same as the above but may be shortened and require appropriate supports possibly including and alternate pencil. The student will include items from at least two genres (reflecting the EEO’s) which would include at minimum informational text (cited) and personal narrative.

Texts for independent reading or for class read aloud to support the content

- Strategies for selecting the most relevant evidence to support analysis
- Considerations for selecting meaningful evidence (e.g., relevance to purpose, course, objectivity, copyright date, cultural and world perspective)
- Models and characteristics of rhetorical appeals (emotional, logical, and ethical)
- Definition and aspects of context (purpose, subject, audience, situation)
- Definition and aspects of genre
- Definition and aspects of mode (expository, narrative, persuasive, descriptive)

Key Skills:

- Determine an author’s point of view and purpose, drawing upon specific evidence as support
- Evaluate an author’s selection and use of information; determine which pieces of information are most important for comprehending a text
- Analyze how authors use rhetorical appeals (emotional, logical, and ethical) to advance their points of view and accomplish their purpose
- Identify modes in texts, and critique authors’ choice of these modes to convey their point of view or message
- Prior to writing, carefully analyze the context of communication; use that analysis to support genre selection

Critical Language:

Evaluating, determining importance, relevance, mode, analyze, rhetorical appeal, voice, context, age inequity, ageism

SSN: Ageism, age inequity, persuade, appeals to thinking feeling and ethics, evaluating

Learning Experience # 13

The teacher may bring in literary resources (poems, short stories, etc.) on sexual orientation themes so that students can connect themes with their personal perspectives and analyze authors’ rhetorical appeals. [Understanding text, Responding to text, Critiquing text]

Generalization Connection(s):

The analysis of authors’ intended purposes and points of view helps readers better understand the choices authors make and the intended impact of those choices

Assessment:

Students will produce a double journal entry selecting the most relevant evidence from the text and then responding in two ways. The first response will be to identify the author’s rhetorical devices used in the text. The second response is for students to examine their own perspective on the inequity issue.

SSN: Using the Compare Contrast graphic organizer

Learning Experience # 14

The teacher may utilize small group discussion formats (e.g., literature circles) so that students can explore collaboratively the age and gender themes raised/implied in an anchor text (e.g., To Kill a Mockingbird) and connect those themes with discussions of current issues. [Understanding text, Responding to text, Critiquing text]

Generalization Connection(s):
The analysis of authors’ intended purposes and points of view helps readers better understand the choices authors’ make and the intended impact of those choices

The choice of an appropriate genre for writing requires a close evaluation of context

Decisions about the selection of relevant evidence, development of rhetorical appeals, and crafting of style, voice, and tone should reflect the consideration of the audience
