

Performance Watch Summary

Designation Guide for 2023-24

Overview

This resource describes the performance watch process for the 2023-24 school year. This resource assumes knowledge about the state accountability system, accountability clock, and request to reconsider processes. See the links for additional information. The intent of this resource is to help build understanding of the requirements associated with plan types and clock status, as well as an understanding of the various accountability scenarios that are possible in 2023 (see tables below).

Implications of the Performance Framework Pause

In response to disruptions created by COVID-19, the Department of Education paused the performance frameworks for two school years (2020 and 2021). For 2021, district and school plan types were rolled over from the 2020 (which were rolled over from 2019). During this pause, the status of schools and districts on the accountability clock was not adjusted in 2020 or 2021. In 2022, frameworks were shared for schools and districts, and clock status was paused unless schools and districts were eligible to engage in the request to reconsider process. In 2023, the Department will return to the traditional rating and clock progression process. Schools and districts will continue to be eligible for the request to reconsider process through the accreditation portal.

Accreditation and Request to Reconsider Process

Request to reconsider is a district's opportunity to request a change to the state-calculated district or school performance framework rating. If the district disagrees with the preliminary framework plan type, they may submit additional evidence to make a case for a different plan type. Updated guidance about this year's accreditation and request to reconsider process is available at this webpage:
