This unit was authored by a team of Colorado educators. The template provided one example of unit design that enabled teacher-authors to organize possible learning experiences, resources, differentiation, and assessments. The unit is intended to support teachers, schools, and districts as they make their own local decisions around the best instructional plans and practices for all students.

Critical Language:

includes the Academic and Technical vocabulary, semantics, and discourse which are particular to and necessary for accessing a given discipline.

EXAMPLE: A student in Language Arts can demonstrate the ability to apply and comprehend critical language through the following statement: “Mark Twain exposes the hypocrisy of slavery through the use of satire.”

A student in _______________ can demonstrate the ability to apply and comprehend critical language through the following statement(s):

Independent participation in a variety of fitness related physical activity in the community requires awareness of self and others for optimal safety and responsibility.

Academic Vocabulary:

- Evaluate, Consumer Choices, Community, Design, Role of Cooperation, Demonstrate, Independence, Empathy, Non-discriminatory/bias/judgment, Positive Influence, Diversity, Identify, Access

Technical Vocabulary:

- Physical Activity, Components of Fitness (Strength, Flexibility, Cardio Vascular, Frequency, Intensity), Water safety, AEDs, Safety hazard, Safety equipment, Wilderness adventure
Colorado Teacher-Authored Sample Instructional Unit

Unit Description:
This unit provides opportunities for students to develop skills as adventure leaders that will enhance their independence for exploration in wilderness experiences. These developed skills will potentially include positive social behavior, decision making, communication, collaboration and outdoor safety practices. The ultimate goal will be for students to have an understanding and appreciation for the benefits of lifelong physical activity. The unit culminates with students participating in a wilderness experience designed and led by them cultivating individual physical, mental, and social strengths that lead to strong group dynamics.

Considerations:
This unit was designed with rural mountain areas in mind. However, this could be taught in any area using available natural opportunities in any terrain or season. This can be also used with the intent of integrating with other class content, such as history, language, science or math. Additionally, students will bring their unique backgrounds and levels of experience prior to this adventure. Instructors should consult their school field trip procedures for protocol on permission slips, health forms, transportation, etc. As authors of this unit, we decided to change the name of the unit to “Adventure Leader” since the focus was on the development of skills as adventure leaders with a special emphasis on wilderness experiences. The change stays true to the original concepts and generalizations written by the authors of the unit overview.

Unit Generalizations

Key Generalization(s):
- Socially responsible behaviors form the framework for lifelong physical activity

Supporting Generalizations:
- Attention to safety illustrates socially responsible behavior
- Increased autonomy carries an increased attention to safety

Performance Assessment: The capstone/summative assessment for this unit.

Claims:
(Key generalization(s) to be mastered and demonstrated through the capstone assessment.)
- Socially responsible behaviors form the framework for lifelong physical activity!

Stimulus Material:
(Engaging scenario that includes role, audience, goal/outcome and explicitly connects the key generalization)
- You and a group of your peers are adventure leaders and have been assigned the task of preparing a group of high school students for a hiking trip. The purpose of this trip will be for students to develop independent, physical, social and outdoor wilderness skills that will allow them to move through the backcountry with peers while focusing on the groups’ safety (e.g., equipment use, decision making, group-collaboration and communication skills.) You and your group members will take on individual responsibilities as part of the organized plan you will create that will help ensure a successful wilderness experience for all. These responsibilities will include navigation, safety (first-responder), trip-planning, equipment management, wellness monitoring, etc.

Product/Evidence:
(Expected product from students)
- Students will create and implement an organized plan with their peers for a hiking trip. This plan will demonstrate competencies in physical, social, outdoor and independent wilderness skills in a group setting. (e.g., equipment use, decision making, group collaboration and communication skills).

Differentiation:
(Multiple modes for student expression)
- Students’ participation in the wilderness adventure is naturally differentiated.
  - If unable to participate in the wilderness adventure activity, students may demonstrate application of knowledge of wilderness skills through summarizing each role and demonstrating 3 basic skills required in each role (e.g., oral or written communication.)

Prior Knowledge and Experiences
Students engaging in this unit are presumed to have prior working knowledge of independent work, group work, and positive social behavior. Students may also possess different levels of fitness, self-awareness, safety, outdoor skills, leadership, and group dynamics.

Learning Experience #1
The teacher may introduce examples of lifelong benefits of physical activity (e.g., reducing high blood pressure, mental wellness and physical strength) so students can begin to make connections between their current level of physical activity and overall wellness.

Generalization Connection(s):
- Socially responsible behaviors form the framework for lifelong physical activity

Assessment:
Students will assess their current level of fitness by participating in a series of physical challenges (e.g., skipping, running, jumping-jacks). Students will then use a t-chart to reflect on potential benefits each of these physical activities may have as they pertain to improving fitness (e.g., t-chart http://www.eduplace.com/graphicorganizer/pdf/tchart_eng.pdf).

Learning Experience # 3

The teacher may pose various questions about students’ experiences in the wilderness (e.g., How comfortable are you sleeping outdoors, hiking through various levels of terrain, or travelling to an unfamiliar destination?) so student can begin to recognize their individual comfort levels with various wilderness activities (e.g., hiking, camping, rafting).

Learning Experience # 6

The teacher may introduce roles in a wilderness adventure (e.g., navigator, first-responder, trip-planner, equipment manager, wellness monitor, environmental specialist) so student can identify their strengths and make connections between roles and the success of the outdoor experience.

Generalization Connection(s):
Increased autonomy carries an increased attention to safety

Student Resources:
- http://www.visitleadvilleco.com/hiking_trails (Local trail descriptions, Leadville, CO)

Assessment:
Students will participate in small group skill stations that will enable them to explain the wilderness adventure roles. (Refer to teacher resources). At the end of the station rounds students will write a persuasive argument regarding the role best suited for them.
- navigator
- first-responder
- trip-planner
- equipment manager

Learning Experience # 7

The teacher may introduce mock wilderness scenarios (see teacher resources) with a focus on role identifications within each of the scenarios so student can make informed decisions about roles and responsibilities pertaining to wilderness experiences and how role-specific actions impact the group dynamics.
