This unit was authored by a team of Colorado educators. The template provided one example of unit design that enabled teacher-authors to organize possible learning experiences, resources, differentiation, and assessments. The unit is intended to support teachers, schools, and districts as they make their own local decisions around the best instructional plans and practices for all students.

As a democratic system of government emerges, laws are created to promote self-determination.
Unit Description:
This unit focuses on the foundations of U.S. government, the Constitution and the development of an American voice. The unit begins with a look at the major social, economic and political aspects of the newly independent 13 states. Then, students examine the Constitutional Convention and the various changes, compromises and additions to the Constitution necessary to promote the common good and provide individual rights to citizens. Next, students study the development of a political culture in the United States and how this led to an American identity in the global world. Finally, the unit culminates in a performance assessment which has students creating a presentation for a United Nations Youth Assembly to share the principles of American democracy and evolution of the American identity within its first 50 years.

Considerations:
In the first Learning Experience, the assessment is for students to complete a WebQuest has not been developed. Resources are provided for the teacher to develop the WebQuest, or students may be challenged to create their own WebQuest.

Also, If you are teaching the four 8th grade units in sequence, we as the authors of these instructional units, recommend that you do not teach the final Learning Experience in the next unit, titled “Growing Pains.” The fourth unit “Reality Check” is already set up with a transition Learning Experience.

Unit Generalizations

Key Generalization:
The movement of people and ideas influences cultural diffusion by both enriching a culture and increasing social tensions

Supporting Generalizations:
- Ongoing tensions and struggles between individual rights and the common good can redefine a nation’s identity
- The principles, institutions, and systems of a government reflect beliefs about power and authority
- The struggle between individual rights, states’ rights, and the powers of the federal government provides a constant tension in national political culture
- Maintenance of the common good oftentimes requires a balance of individual freedoms and public demands

Performance Assessment: The capstone/summative assessment for this unit.

Claims:
(Key generalization(s) to be mastered and demonstrated through the capstone assessment.)
The establishment of and beliefs about the common good, and an individual’s rights, roles, and responsibilities, influences the development of a national identity

Stimulus Material:
(Engaging scenario that includes role, audience, goal/outcome and explicitly connects the key generalization)
You are in a group of student ambassadors representing the United States in the United Nations Youth Assembly at a global convention. The focus of this global convention is to promote appreciation among countries of the ongoing tensions and struggles gone through to establish and maintain a national identity. You will develop a presentation highlighting how the basic values and principles of American democracy evolved within its first 50 years, further developing our national identity and establishing our voice.

Product/Evidence:
(Expected product from students)
Students will create a multimedia presentation (e.g., PowerPoint, Prezi, Moviemaker) in groups of 2 – 4 to share with the class. The presentation should include primary sources (e.g., music, images, documents, newspapers) which reflect the importance of promoting the common good, changes in rights, roles and responsibilities of American citizens, and examples of the new national identity. Also included in the presentation should be an interpretation of the sources and how they contributed to our identity as Americans.

Differentiation:
(Multiple modes for student expression)
Each student in the group may be required to construct one part of the presentation; however, students then may be assigned one of the topics.
